

ABSTRACT

The invention involves a novel method of advertising wherein advertisers are able to target market to employees through the placement of advertisements on employee pay stubs. The method involves the collection of information about advertisements from advertisers and employees and 5 then matching employee information to the desired target audience of advertisements.

561549.1